Richard Skolnik, M.P.A.

After working over 40 years in international development and global health in almost 50 different countries, Richard Skolnik will share some of what he has learned through his journey – and offer insights into strategies that might make the United States a healthier place.

Mr. Skolnik spent 25 years working at the World Bank, retiring as the Director for Health and Education for the South Asia Region.

Afterwards, he taught undergraduate and graduate global health courses at The George Washington University and Yale University for 15 years. He has written a widely used textbook, Global Health 101, third edition, and is the Instructor for Yale's massive open online course, Essentials of Global Health. Richard Skolnik has been involved in maternal, newborn, and child health, communicable disease control, and health systems development in Africa and South Asia. He has also worked extensively on the global agenda for the control of TB, the eradication of polio, and on improved priority setting for investing in health.

Richard Skolnik is a 1967 graduate of Dayton Fairview High School. He received a Bachelor of Arts (BA) degree from Yale University and a Master of Public Affairs (MPA) degree from the Woodrow Wilson School of Princeton University. He has also learned – to varying degrees – French, Spanish, Cantonese, Mandarin, Ilocano, and Tagalog.
